

Work and study abroad: where to start?

Many of us think about migration abroad due to the unstable economic situation in the state because of low wages. But the problem is that of all those who wish to leave the country, only 11% carry out the dream, what's the problem? What prevents our fellow citizens to leave the country and you need to migrate? Let's step through will understand this situation.

Language Problem

Many people just can't bring myself to learn the language of the country in which they are going to leave, and even the foundations for them nepostizhnyim. The reason for this can be two things: laziness and fear, and everything can be fixed. Nobody will demand from You a perfect knowledge of English or German languages, for example, when You arrive to work an ordinary clerk in Germany or Britain. But in order not to get lost in the crowd and not to get into danger, You just have to know the spoken language at a basic level. If You are not able to independently learn the language, learn a new language courses that are 100% will give You the basic knowledge!

Job search

The problem of finding work is in second place as the most willing to work outside the country are afraid to be on the street, or to work without a passport for the food. Often our citizens are exploited in Europe, however, until a time; not to fall into the trap when applying for a job abroad, you need to ask about the license of the firm taking You to work and learn in the Embassy information. Talk to the employer even if in absentia, find reviews about this overseas company to contact its employees, in General, act!

Laziness

Laziness we mentioned in the first paragraph, but often, it so happens that after studying the language and finding a job abroad, people too lazy to do it by relocation, finding housing and collecting documents for migration. It would seem that everything is ready and only need to buy plane tickets and fly away, but of Course, the alternative of laziness can be found working within the borders of his native country, which is rare. In this case, you need cheap place that write research papers to look at things objectively and think about your future, because in the countries of "first world" and higher salaries, and the law works more effectively, and the attitude of the people is much better (especially if You are a highly skilled worker). Therefore, relocating should think very, very seriously, "do not pull the cat's tail"!
